The Cyrus Cylinder or Cyrus Charter (Persian: «سزوروك»اوتسس) is an ancient clay cylinder, now broken into several pieces, on which is written a declaration in Akkadian cuneiform script in the name of Persia's Achaemenid king Cyrus the Great. It dates from the 6th century BC and was discovered in the ruins of Babylon in Mesopotamia (modern Iraq) in 1879.

This one exceeded The Children of Blood and Bone for me and has taken its rightful place next to The Gilded Ones as my favorite BIPOC fantasy... heck right up there with my favorite fantasy period of the year. I loved that there was a gratifying ending but a great lead in to the next book without the typical frustrating cliffhanger.

At the base of the Direwind Cliffs are deep valleys infested with death and disease. Of the griffons, bears, and wolves that are still alive, most are infected with some sort of illness, perhaps brought on by the Darkroot sporal which are now rampant in the area and feeding off the corpses of the deceased.
